

From the Committee to Elect Susan Pace Hamill

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Statement of Susan Pace Hamill on Raising Over $120,000 in Her Race for State House District 63

Monday, February 1, 2010

I am proud to report that over the past several months, my campaign has raised over $120,000. Every cent of that money has come from personal relationships. My contributors are people who believe in what I stand for - a fairer tax system that is based on biblical principles. I am deeply humbled and honored by the support I have received, and look forward to carrying my message of applying Christian principles to public policy to the voters in district 63.

Susan Pace Hamill is a law professor at the University of Alabama Law School, where she has taught since 1994. Susan earned her law degree at Tulane University Law School. In 2002, Susan earned her Master's degree in Theological Studies from Beeson Divinity School at Samford University. Since 2002, Susan has focused her efforts on advocating for fairer tax policies rooted in biblical principles. Susan is currently seeking the Democratic nomination for Alabama House District 63.
